CHARGE CROSBY WITH FORGERY

Two Affidavits Filed Against Former Trustee, Alleging Use of Paper Hangers Names.

SAID TO HAVE OBTAINED $252

Charged That he Affixed Signatures of Jackman, Jarvis and Hughes to Vouchers.

Two affidavits, both charging forgery, were filed against Edward Crosby, former trustee of Rushville township, in Mayor Black's court late this afternoon. Mr. Crosby was released on a bond for one thousand dollars. The preliminary trial was set for September 14. Reuben Conner, an attorney of Connersville has been retained by the former trustee to defend him and appeared in the mayor's court this afternoon. The affidavits were filed by Deputy Prosecutor Wallace Morgan, but the case will be tried by Prosecutor John C. Cheney of Shelbyville.

The charges are very specific and give definitely what the former trustee is alleged to have forged, whose name is used and the exact amounts. It is charged in the affidavits that Mr. Crosby forged the name of Thomas Hughes, a paper hanger, on a voucher for $110, and the names of Theodore Jarvis and W. F. Jackman, also paper hangers, on another voucher for $142.

Whenever a trustee pays out any money, he is supposed to receive in return as a receipt, showing that he has paid out that sum of money, a piece of paper, which is known as a voucher. It is charged by the field examiners, who worked here, that the three paper hangers, Jackman, Jarvis and Hughes, did not sign the vouchers, but that the former trustee forged their names.

Out of the whole sum of money, which totaled near eight thousand dollars and which was charged up against Mr. Crosby as a shortage, only $252 can be found, with which even a charge of wrong doing can be made. Indianapolis papers carried long stories of the shortage with which the former trustee was charged by the field examiners. They told specifically of the items where Mr. Crosby had made mistakes and where he had disobeyed the law. Yet out of that long list of charges, in which it was declared that he was short to the extent of near eight thousand dollars, only two specific charges are made. He stands accused of using illegally eight thousand dollars of the township's money, while the only two affidavits which could be made out against him were for a sum total of $252.

The prosecution will be made by John C. Cheney of Shelbyville, prosecutor of the sixteenth judicial district, composed of this and Shelby counties. Mr. Crosby was anxious that the preliminary trial be held immediately, but it was deferred until September 14, according to the wishes of the prosecutor. Mr. Cheney is in the midst of a campaign and requested that the case not come up for trial until he had completed his race for the nomination for prosecuting attorney on the Democratic ticket.

Not many weeks ago, the story was circulated that the deputy prosecutor, who filed the affidavit and Mr. Crosby were related, and that the official would not act in the matter. It was believed that the rumor was started with evil intent as the two men are no relation whatever.

The I. & C. traction company are giving their usual excellent accommodations and service to fair ground passengers. The I. & C. is certainly more of a pleasure to travel on than the hot dusty pike or a train.

ENJOY BIG HOME COMING

Large Crowd Assembled at Hannegan Christian Church Yesterday.

The monster home coming and rally day at the Hannegan Christian church yesterday was a pronounced success. The usual services, Sunday school and church were held in the morning and at the noon hour the big basket dinner, which was the feature of the day, was held. In the afternoon a roll call was held and was followed by a sermon by the Rev. R. W. Abberley, pastor of the Main Street Christian church. A service was also held in the evening. A number of other churches joined in the big day and a very enjoyable time was had.

SERVICES WERE HELD YESTERDAY

Body of Mrs. Namah Meredith is Shipped to Iowa for Burial at Side of Husband.

RELATIVES GO WITH REMAINS

The funeral services of "Aunt" Namah Meredith, who died on Saturday from a stroke of paralysis which she had two weeks ago last Thursday, were held at the Meredith residence in North Morgan street yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. The services were conducted by the Rev. J. W. Turner of the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal church. The remains were sent to Bedford, Iowa, this morning, where they will be interred at the side of her husband, Joseph C. Meredith, who was buried there in 1861. John and Joseph Meredith accompanied the body to its destination.

WARNED TO WATCH FOR PICKPOCKETS

Have Been Working Successfully all Over This Section of State For Past Few Weeks.

EXPECTED AT RUSH COUNTY

The managers of the Rush county fair are anticipating trouble with pickpockets this year since they have been working at all of the county fairs, home comings and chautauquas in this section of the State this year. The members of the fair board warn patrons at the fair to be on the lookout for suspicious characters, in order that no one will suffer any financial loss. Robbers have been working successfully for the past few weeks and in no one instance have any of the offenders ever been apprehended. They picked several pockets here during the chautauqua. It is believed that the same men have committed all of the thefts in this part of the State. Police will be well distributed over the grounds and every effort will be made to protect the people attending the fair.

BUSINESS MAN DEAD.

Jacob Greisinger, one of the oldest business men of Cambridge City, is dead. He was born near Heidelberg, Germany, December 25, 1838, and came to Cambridge City in 1866. He was a tailor for sixty years. Four children survive him.

HAD TO CANCEL SHOW CONTRACT

Secretary King Unable to Find Space on Fair Ground For Buckskin Ben Attraction.

CROWDS WERE OUT YESTERDAY

Hog and Sheep Pens Are Full and More Race Horses Are Here Than Ever Before.

It's full up and overflowing, that Rush county fair ground and there is absolutely no chance for anything else on the ground with one exception. That is the crowd. Everything is full, but the people who have been on the grounds today and who thronged them yesterday. The secretary found it necessary to cancel a contract with the Buckskin Ben wild west show today on account of the lack of space. The show had a contract for one hundred feet of front space and the secretary has at last decided that it will be absolutely impossible to accommodate the attraction. Every available spot on the large plot of ground is taken by shows and stands and all of the members of the fair board are busy turning away applicants for position.

The lack of ground space this year is partially due to the fact that the show ring back of the amphitheater has been converted back to the original purpose for which it was built, to show entries in the contests and to award premiums. Last year, and only that one year, the ring was used for shows. It was called the pike and there most of the attractions on the grounds were stationed. But this year it is different and not as many shows can be accommodated. But even at that, the members of the fair board say that they have more and a greater variety of shows than ever before. They are stationed all over the ground in every conceivable spot, nook and corner.

But the shows will not be the only feature of this year's annual exhibition. A member of the fair board said today that there was a greater number of race horses and more stock for show purposes on the grounds now than there ever were before at this time in the week. The hog and sheep pens are all full and the cattle and horse stalls will not accommodate many more heads. The members of the fair board are so enthusiastic over the prospects for this year's fair that they can hardly suppress their joy.

The crowds which thronged the grounds yesterday made the day seem like one of the days of the fair. The traction cars were taxed to their capacity and a number of people traveled out in buggies and automobiles. The fact that all of the stands and shows were open and doing business made it seem all the more like regular fair day.

LEAVES TO CAMPAIGN WEST

Watson Joins Sherman at St. Louis For Two Weeks' Tour.

James E. Watson left this afternoon for St. Louis, where he will join Vice President James Sherman, for a speaking tour through Missouri and Oklahoma. The "Two Jims" have been assigned twenty dates for joint campaigning in the States mentioned, by the Republican National committee. They will be out for about three weeks.

STOP PETITION TO DRAIN RIVER

Attorneys File Written Motion to Withdraw Paper Asking Improvement of Flatrock.

INTENSE INTEREST IN SUIT

Action Had Already Been Killed by Remonstrance Containing 80 Per Cent. Land Owners Affected.

The attorneys for the petitioners in the Flatrock drainage suit, Sexton & McColgin, filed a written motion in the clerk of the circuit court's office late Saturday afternoon, asking that the petition to drain Flatrock be dismissed at the cost of the petitioners. The case would have come before the notice of the court in the coming term, when he would have rendered a decision. The proceedings are now a matter of history, since the petitioners have asked that the motion be dismissed. The written motion for dismissal was filed only after the remonstrators had filed a remonstrance which contained about eighty percent of the land owners affected by the petition. This was over the required number to kill the petition, according to the statute on that subject and would have resulted in the judge refusing to grant the petition.

The filing of the withdrawal motion marks the close of one of the most hotly contested legal battles in the history of Rush county with few exceptions. It is probable that more residents were directly affected by the attempt to straighten the river than any other legal action that was ever taken. The river flows, rather meanders, down the full length of Rush county and every farmer, through whose land the stream passes, was an interested party in the case, either as a petitioner or a remonstrator.

The agitation wrought up by the farmers, who were the most interested in stopping the granting of the petition, were largely responsible for the intense interest which was taken in the question all over the county. It will be remembered that public meetings were held in the court house and at various places over the county when signers for the remonstrance were obtained. Land owners were all wrought up over the question and many communications were addressed to the newspapers for publication. Several prominent farmers, directed the campaign of the remonstrators in getting signers and Smith, Camborn & Smith were retained to represent the big body of farmers. They finally filed a remonstrance in the clerk's office, which was within the time limit and which contained the names of about eighty per cent of the land owners who were affected by the proposed improvement. Attorneys say that the eighty per cent was far above the number which was necessary to kill the petition.

The petitioners in the mean time are resting assured in the fact that the law on that subject states specifically that a petition can be filed to drain or change the course of a stream at any time and as many times as they see fit to do so. Local attorneys say that the petitioners can go through the same proceedings as many times as they see fit and that the remonstrators will be compelled to fight it again if they do not desire that the petition be granted.

The farmers of Henry county were drawn into the net of remonstrators, who fought the improvement. Flatrock flows through the corner of the adjoining county and there the farmers held meetings and aroused a feeling against the proposed drain. Many remonstrators were obtained there.

PASTOR ACCEPTS CALL

The Rev. J. B. Meacham Will Come September 18 to Take up Work.

The Rev. J. B. Meacham of Ripley, Ohio, has accepted the unanimous call of the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church of this city. He will come here to begin his ministry September 18. The church pulpit has been vacant for the past few months, due to the resignation of the Rev. J. F. Cowling. Several ministers have been heard here during the summer.

PASSING OF HESTER CLOSES QUARREL

Sheriff Called to Walton Farm, Tenant Fearing That Owner Would Cause Trouble.

HAS BEEN IN CIRCUIT COURT

That Sheriff Clata Bebout is not duty-bound to guard over all of the residents of Rush county, when they fear danger is lurking near, is evidenced by the fact that the officers refused to answer a call to the Walton farm, west of the city this morning, when Ed Hester, tenant there, called for him. Hester told the sheriff that he was moving and that he feared that he would have trouble with Mrs. Mary Walton, who owns the land. He said that she was there and judging from her past actions, thought that she would probably start something.

The passing of Hester will also mark the passing of a controversy which has been brought to light by the fact that the officers and the court had been asked to settle the questions involved on other occasions. Hester had a contract to run the farm. It has not been many months since he filed suit in the circuit court against Mrs. Walton, alleging that she had threatened to dynamite his home, and making other similar charges. Mrs. Walton came back with a cross complaint and the suit was finally dismissed before any action was taken. The sheriff was called out there on one occasion to quell a disturbance. Up to a late hour this afternoon the sheriff had not received any word to come out and it is supposed that the passing was made without any damage to the parties concerned.

Saturday noon, Dr. Smiley, who has an office in the rear of Mr. Pelham's drug store, and the proprietor left the store together. In the afternoon when Dr. Smiley returned to his office he found that Mr. Pelham had not returned and on inquiry Mrs. Pelham informed him that her husband had gone to Rushville. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Pelham informed Dr. Smiley that her husband had gone for good. The same afternoon the departed man's wife also left Glenwood, presumably for Shelbyville. Dame Rumor carries many stories—but the entire event is simply a story behind the scenes of which the general public is far from fully informed, because that it is known only to the minds of those concerned.

IS ADMITTED FOR PROBATION

Will of Late Lewis J. Newhouse Filed This Afternoon at County Clerk's Office.

S. R. NEWHOUSE IS EXECUTOR

The will of the late Lewis J. Newhouse was admitted to the county clerk this afternoon for probation. Mr. Newhouse's will provides that after the payment of his just debts that his land in Jackson township and his house and lot in Ninth street shall be sold at public sale, the proceeds that are derived from said sale to be divided in equal shares among Mrs. Hannah Oldham, Mrs. Alley Bell, Marshall E. Newhouse, Pleasant A. Newhouse and Harvey M. Newhouse. His house and personal property in North Sexton street is to go through the same process at the death of his widow, Alice R. Newhouse. Samuel R. Newhouse is named as the executor of the will.

NEWLY MARRIED MAN DEPARTS

That is Information Given Out by Mrs. Frank Pelham Concerning Husband to Dr. Smiley.

GLENWOOD GOSSIP IS AGOG

They Were Married on August Thirteenth in This City—She Was 16 and he a Grass Widower.

It has often been said that the true stories from life carry more interest than any fictitious ones conceived in the mind of a versatile genius. If a person would go to Glenwood and visit the saw mill, the blacksmith shop, the general store, the meat market, and the private homes and would sit quite long enough he would gradually be admitted to membership in the village gossip club, which puts on the soft, soft, pedal when she sees a stranger. Today they have such a rare piece of "dope" that strangers or nothing else causes them to decrease the gasoline or the spark.

Several months ago Frank Pelham who had previous to that time been employed as a drug clerk at Shelbyville, came to the little metropolis and opened up a drug dispensary. As time went along a courtship was started by him with Miss Florence E. Wagner, the belle of the village. On the thirteenth day of August the climax was reached when they applied at the county clerk's bar and obtained a marriage license. That night the sixteen-year-old girl (who will be seventeen early in October) and the young grass widower were married in this city. They returned to their home in Glenwood and up to Saturday things went as smooth as could be.

Saturday noon, Dr. Smiley, who has an office in the rear of Mr. Pelham's drug store, and the proprietor left the store together. In the afternoon when Dr. Smiley returned to his office he found that Mr. Pelham had not returned and on inquiry Mrs. Pelham informed him that her husband had gone to Rushville. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Pelham informed Dr. Smiley that her husband had gone for good. The same afternoon the departed man's wife also left Glenwood, presumably for Shelbyville. Dame Rumor carries many stories—but the entire event is simply a story behind the scenes of which the general public is far from fully informed, because that it is known only to the minds of those concerned.

WAS INJURED IN ACCIDENT

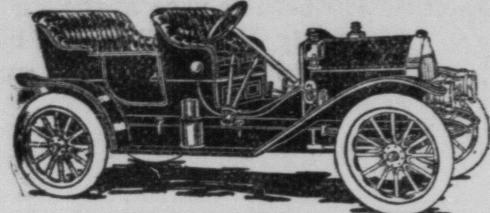

Willie Beale, Nephew of John Beale, Sustains Broken Arm and Nose Saturday.

IS RESTING COMFORTABLY

Willie Beale, who is a nephew of John Beale, the plumer, met with a very serious accident in Indianapolis on last Saturday night, which resulted in a broken arm and nose and many bad bruises. He had gotten off of a city car and had started around behind the car to cross the other track, when he was struck by an interurban car and knocked several feet. He is employed with the G. & J. Tire company in Indianapolis. His uncle, John Beale, was in Indianapolis yesterday to see him and reports him as resting very comfortably.

The balloon race at the Rush County Fair will be the big attraction, Aug. 30, 31, and Sept. 1 and 2.

"Eggs is Eggs" at Present Time

An egg is an egg in Indiana no matter what it contains. It has always been so. National pure food laws and State pure food laws have dragged every other commodity that makes up a part of man's bill of fare into the line of purity. But eggs have been conservative and have kept to the old manner of the days when nobody asked how a thing was made. The security of the egg, however, is endangered, for both dealers and State boards of health over the country are working alone or combining to put a stop to a practice of running through the channels of trade annually hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of more or less rotten eggs. According to present indications Indiana is on the edge of a pitched battle between the elements contending for strict supervision of this widely used commodity and those who will resist the attempt to destroy the profits of selling eggs taken out of the incubator and gathered months late from nests in the mow under last year's hay crop.

The security of the egg, however, is endangered, for both dealers and State boards of health over the country are working alone or combining to put a stop to a practice of running through the channels of trade annually hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of more or less rotten eggs. According to present indications Indiana is on the edge of a pitched battle between the elements contending for strict supervision of this widely used commodity and those who will resist the attempt to destroy the profits of selling eggs taken out of the incubator and gathered months late from nests in the mow under last year's hay crop.

Realizing the gravity of the problem before the State board of health in attaining any degree of success in cleaning up the situation, H. E. Barnard, State food and drug commissioner, has prepared for the July bulletin of the department, soon to be published, the following articles on the egg question:

"For many years the consumer, although well aware of the fact that much of his food was adulterated, made little or no protest and took what came to him from the grocery store and market without complaint. The passage of the pure food law has largely changed the order of things and each year has seen an improvement in the character of the food supply.

"There is one article of food, however, which, because of the fact that it is sold in its original package, has received little attention from food inspectors. The dealers in eggs, unhampered by law, still holds true to the traditions of his trade and sells 'eggs as eggs' without regard for their condition at the time they leave his hands. Consequently the consumer who buys eggs at the grocery or of the huckster may get fresh eggs or storage eggs which are in no way suitable for use as food. A dealer in bad meat can be summarily punished, but the dealer in bad eggs, under the Indiana food law, is practically immune from prosecution. This is due to the fact that at the time of the passage of the law an amendment was offered calling special attention to the egg question and provided that it should be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell or offer for sale any eggs after the same had been placed in an incubator, or to sell or offer for sale knowingly eggs in a rotten, decayed condition to be used for food. This well intentioned amendment in its provision made use of the word 'knowingly,' and this makes it necessary for the State in prosecuting dealers in bad eggs to produce evidence to show that the dealer knowingly violated the law, an obvious impossibility in most instances.

"While egg raising is made a business of by many men, yet by far the bulk of the eggs which come to market still represents the product of the farmer whose wife has a few hens and whose eggs contribute to her pin money. These hens are not kept in close quarters, but have the free range of the farm, and during the summer time make their nests wherever their fancy dictates. Consequently, the eggs are not removed from many nests until after they are stale and too frequently are not before they have been sat upon by the hens. These eggs are collected from time to time by hucksters and exchanged for other products at the grocery store and not until they reach the hands of the large commission merchant or egg dealer are they ever sorted as to their character. Fortunately a simple and practicable way is at hand whereby all eggs may be tested to determine their condition by holding an egg in front of a strong light. The contents of the egg may be plainly seen and when in normal condition has a very characteristic appearance. As the egg becomes stale or as the embryo develops, the appearance of the egg changes so that the consumer can easily determine which eggs are in good condition and which are not. The process of testing eggs in this way is called candling and is largely practiced by egg dealers who wish to know the grade of the goods they supply their customers. If all consumers insisted on having candled eggs sent to their homes and refused to pay for eggs which, when broken, appear stale or unsound, all dealers would soon be forced to put their eggs to the candling test and consequently in order that they themselves should be protected from loss, to require that the eggs they purchased were likewise candled. Recently commission merchants have adopted the plan of buying and selling eggs on the 'loss off' basis, paying only for eggs which were in good condition. There is no reason why this practice should not become universal, as it is fair and just and if conscientiously followed, would put a stop to one of the most persistent forms of food adulteration.

The farmer has no more right to sell rotten eggs than the butcher has to sell diseased meat or the grain dealer moldy grains, and if such eggs are included in his shipment, his returns should be correspondingly decreased.

"It is to be hoped that the present law will be amended at the next session of the legislature so as to hold the dealer who sells eggs responsible for their character in the same way that he is held responsible for every other foodstuff which he carries in stock. When he is no longer able to shift the responsibility upon the person from whom he purchased, it will be possible to establish a new definition for eggs to require that an egg be a sound, fresh, uninhabited product of the hen."

In order to obtain light on the methods used in the other great egg producing States and find out whether their success or failure may contribute valuable information to those in charge of the campaign in Indiana, Mr. Barnard has written to the food and drug commissioners of the State in the middle west. That the problem is one widely discussed and under the consideration of those in authority is proved by the numerous notices of prosecutions attempted here and there over the country. The United States government, through the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture, is interesting itself in the question, and only last week Mr. Barnard received a request from Washington for information regarding the State and city regulations in Indiana covering the sale of poultry and eggs.

At conspicuous places on all roads entering Carthage are posted large signs warning the public against violating the speed limit in Carthage. A complaint has come to us that a few nights ago two carriages were racing down Main street as fast as the horses could be made to go under the lash. Our informant is quite certain he knows who the guilty parties are, and he insists that we mention the matter and say that if it occurs again the names will be given to the grand jury. Taggart papers which have been condemning W. J. Bryan because of his fight against "political assassins" in Nebraska, are at a loss to know what to say or do since the Taggart committee put up its pretense of inviting Mr. Bryan to speak in Indiana. These papers have called Mr. Bryan a "traitor." Will they eat their words?

Drag the Roads.

During the past few years great progress has been made in the art of keeping roads and streets in repair by the use of the Road Drag.

The machine has developed from a split leg drag used on the western mud roads to a drag made of steel angle bars set so as to drag and scrape at an angle.

The drag is a wonderfully effective instrument for surfacing and for smoothing roads. No one who has failed to observe it could be persuaded that it accomplishes what it really does. It grinds off lumps and fills depressions. It compacts the surface. It crushes all the small pebbles into limestone which mixes with the dirt and makes cement.

The drag saves a large per cent of the cost of the upkeep of roads by preserving material so that it takes about a third less new material to keep a road in fine repair.

The inventor of the instrument spends a large part of his time on the chautauqua platform and receives lucrative fees for telling audiences of the merits of the drag.

The Saturday Evening Post in a recent number gave $6,000 worth of its space extolling the new machine. Farmers everywhere are awakening to the possibility of road making and road preserving by the use of this tool. Recently a road in Iowa was dragged for its entire length of over 400 miles within two hours after a heavy rain. The drag produces marvelous results on the black mud in the prairie regions of the West.

It is just as effective in Rush county on our gravel roads. The gravel road between Mays and Raleigh in this county has the reputation of being the finest and smoothest stretch of road in the State on account of the fact that it has been surfaced for several years with a road drag.

The best results are obtained where the drag is used immediately after a rain. If all the roads in the county could be dragged four or five times each year after rains a large part of the material now used could be saved and the county treasury

Automobiles and Other Things

The Continental and Commercial National bank of Chicago, in its "Annual Crop and Business Report," brings up a very interesting subject—that of the effect of the automobile industry upon the industries of the country. While a number of letters are given, showing both sides of a discussion as to the detrimental or wholesome effect of this new industry, the bank itself does not make advance. The masses of the people who are buying the medium priced machines, have not yet awakened to these two vital facts, viz.: The enormous increase in cost of tire upkeep, and the annual depreciation of the machine."

And the automobile manufacturer's argument is presented as follows:

"The industry is based upon the agree, and we have repeatedly said, that the condition of the people is better now than it ever has been—that the people are living more—than their conditions of living are improved—that they have more conveniences and more enjoyments, and that life has lost much of the drudgery of years ago.

In regard to the later letter, it undoubtedly is true that the automobile is taking the place of the horse, and it is certain that this is a fast age and one that is demanding quick transportation.

Do You Think She Can Interest You?

would be the gainer by many thousands of dollars.

It only takes one man and one team of horses, at an expense of about $4.00 per day to operate a drag, so it is comparatively inexpensive. The instrument only costs about $18.00, and is not patented. It can be bought of any road machinery supply house.

If our street committee in the city of Rushville were awake to the possibilities of the use of the drag a large part of the money expended on our streets might be saved and the surface of the streets might be vastly improved. They are now in a horrible condition, full of holes and bumps, yet they might be made perfectly smooth and passable in a few days at a slight expense with the use of the drag. And the user of valuable vehicles would praise the administration instead of censuring it as they now do.

Vast strides are being made in the science of road making in recent years. Nothing so adds to the wealth of a community as fine roads and streets. Let's keep those of Rush county in fine repair.

The first of September will soon be among us and then it will be high time to chloroform the straw hats.

an emphatic statement. The bank, however, says this:

"The automobile looms up as one of the issues of the day. The growth of the industry is one of the phenomenal developments of the time, and could have occurred only in a time of general prosperity and when the surplus of earnings of the people as compared with former times was very large. At any period prior to ten years ago, the expenditures of the last year upon automobiles would have been inconceivable. With capital increasing faster than population, there is bound to be rapid improvement in the condition of the masses, but without new capital pressing for investment, the demand for labor slackens and industry stagnates."

Two of the letters quoted by the bulletin are interesting, the first from a man who sees great danger in the automobile, and the second from an automobile manufacturer. These two letters follow:

"We believe that thousands of people are buying automobiles who have no business to, the great trouble being in figuring whether they can or can not afford the machine; they do not figure on depreciation. For instance, a salaried man getting $2,500 a year may figure that they can afford to buy a $1,200 machine on the installment plan, because the upkeep, including repairs, gasoline, etc., is but a small amount per month, but he fails to figure that in four years his $1,200 machine will not be worth $400. The machine has thereby sustained a depreciation of $200 a year, which alone is nearly 10 per cent. of the salary of the man in question. Then, too, the upkeep in tires is double what it was two years ago. The advance in tires in the last fifteen months has been something enormous, and there is just now going into effect another very large absolute sound, economic demand. As a result of the great activity in the automobile industry, there was not only an apparent, but an actual recovery from the panic of 1907, earlier than might ordinarily have been expected. Persons who have studied the conditions are convinced that if it had not been for the automobile industry, the general business of the country today, compared to the panic of 1907, would be in about the same condition as the general business of the country in 1896, as compared with the panic of 1893.

For a number of years the country has been absorbing in the neighborhood of a million horse-drawn vehicles annually, which includes vehicles for passengers, freight and agricultural purposes. Every single owner of a horse-drawn vehicle of the simplest and cheapest type will be an actual ultimate buyer of a motor-driven vehicle. Even though the motor vehicle may cost more than the horse-drawn vehicle, the increased efficiency in the way of health and activity on the owner of the motor-driven vehicle, will more than offset the increase in cost of the motor vehicle. In view of the manifest sound, economic basis of the motor vehicle industry, it seems incomprehensible that certain gentlemen, otherwise intelligent, should be so shortsighted as to attempt to 'kill the goose that laid the golden egg,' or to 'look a gift horse in the mouth.'

This is a rapidly moving age, and inside of ten years from this date the present critics of the motor vehicle will be classed in the same category as the farm laborers who opposed the reaping machine, and the legislators who ridiculed the telegraph and other great inventions."

We agree with the statement first quoted that no other time would have seen the automobile industry nearly the success that it has been. We

Some time in the future it will be interesting for those who are now boys to read histories of the period in which they are now living. It will be interesting then to say: "I lived before the time when there were wireless telegraphs, wireless telephones, automobiles and flying machines. I can remember that we thought it was a wonderful thing that Dr. Crippen should be apprehended by wireless telegraph messages."

And yet, we can read the history of the effects of just such things. When the steam engine began to take the place of muscle, factories had strikes and the pessimists prophesied calamity. Yet the steam engine has been a blessing, and nobody in this day will dispute it. The people are the better because it has come. They can travel more quickly on land and sea. They eat tropical fruit in the winter because of it and they light their homes with electricity because it has made such a thing possible. It has reduced the amount of work; yes; but it has given fewer hours the same purchasing power, so that the conditions of the average man are improved.

There are some immediate effects of the automobile industry that are detrimental, but they are comparatively few, and will not and cannot be lasting. Its evils are a symptom and not the disease itself.

The Girl and the Bill

By Bannister Merwin

Illustrations by Ray Walton

(Copyright, 1900, Dodd, Mead Company.)

Poritol drew himself up. "As an attache I am exempt," he said, with a pitiful attempt at dignity.

"You are not exempt from the consequences of a crime like this. Now, get on your knees."

Whimpering, Poritol kneeled.

"Stay in that position."

"Oh, sir—oh, my very dear sir. I—"

"Stay there!" thundered Orme.

Poritol was still, but his lips moved, and his interlaced fingers worked convulsively.

As Orme walked away, he stopped now and then to look back. Poritol did not move, and Orme long carried the picture of that kneeling figure.

"Who was it?" asked Bessie Walingham, as he climbed back over the fence.

"A puppy with sharp teeth," he replied, thinking of what the girl had said. "We might as well forget him."

She studied him in silence, then pointed to the chauffeur, who was down at the side of the car.

"Anything damaged?" Orme queried.

"Yes, sir."

"Much?"

"Two hours' work, sir." "Pshaw!" Orme shut his teeth down hard; Poritol, had he known it, might have felt thankful that he was not near at hand. He turned to Bessie. "How much farther is it?"

"The chauffeur answered. "About three miles, sir."

Three miles over dark country roads—and it was nearly 11 o'clock. He glanced ahead. In the distance a light twinkled.

"Bessie," he said, "come with me to that farmhouse. We must go on. Or, if you prefer to wait here—"

"I'll go with you, of course."

They walked along the road to the farm gate. A cur yelped at their feet as they approached the house, and an old man, coatless and slippers, opened the door, holding an oil lamp high above his head. "Down, Rover! What do you want?" he shouted.

"We've got to have a rig to take us to Winnetka," said Orme. "Our car broke down."

The old man reflected. "Can't do it," he said, at last. "All shet up fer the night. Can't leave the missus alone."

A head protruded from a dark upper window. "Yes, you can, Simeon," growled a woman's guttural voice.

"Wall—I don't know—"

"Yes, you can." She turned to Orme. "He'll take ye fer five dollars cash. Ye can pay me."

Orme turned to Bessie. "Have you any money?" he whispered.

"Heavens! I left my hand bag in my locker at the clubhouse. How stupid!"

"Never mind." Orme saw that he must lose the marked bill after all. Regretfully he took it from his pocket. The woman had disappeared from the window, and now she came to the door and stood behind her husband. Wrapped in an old blanket, she made a gaunt figure, not unlike a squaw. As Orme walked up the two or three steps, she stretched her hand over her husband's shoulder and snatched the bill, examining it closely by the lamp-light.

"What's this writin' on it?" she demanded, fiercely.

"Oh, that's just somebody's joke. It doesn't hurt anything."

"Well, I don't know." She looked at it doubtfully, then crumpled it tight in her fist. "I guess it'll pass. Git a move on you, Simeon."

The old man departed, grumbling, to the barn, and the woman drew back into the house, shutting the door carefully. Orme and Bessie heard the bolts click as she shot them home.

"Hospitable!" exclaimed Bessie, seating herself on the doorstep.

After a wait that seemed interminable, the old man came driving around the house. To a ramshackle buggy he had hitched a decrepit horse. They wedged in as best they could, the old man between them, and at a shuffling amble the nag proceeded through the gate and turned eastward.

In the course of 20 minutes they crossed railroad tracks and entered the shady streets of the village, Bessie directing the old man where to drive. Presently they came to the entrance of what appeared to be an extensive estate. Back among the trees glimmered the lights of a house. "Turn in," said Bessie.

A thought struck Orme. If Poritol, why not the Japanese? Maku and his friends might easily have got back to this place. And if the minister had been able to telephone to his allies from Arradale, they would be expecting him.

"Stop!" he whispered. "Let me out. You drive on to the door and wait there for me."

Bessie nodded. She did not comprehend, but she accepted the situation unhesitatingly.

Orme noted, by the light of the lamp at the gate, the shimmer of the veil that was wound around her hat.

"Give me your veil," he said.

She withdrew the pins and unwound the piece of gossamer. He took it and stepped to the ground, concealing himself among the trees that lined the drive.

The buggy proceeded slowly. Orme followed afoot, on a parallel course, keeping well back among the trees. At a certain point, after the buggy passed, a figure stepped out into the drive, and stood looking after it. From his build and the peculiar agility of his motions, he was recognized as Maku. Orme hunted about till he found a bush from which he could quietly break a wand about six feet long. Stripping it of leaves, he fastened the veil to one end of it and tiptoed toward the drive.

The Japanese was still looking after the buggy, which had drawn up before the house.

Suddenly, out of the darkness a sinuous gray form came floating toward him. It wavered, advanced, halted, then seemed to rush. The sense of the afternoon was fresh in the mind of the Japanese. With screams of terror, he turned and fled down the drive, while Orme, removing the veil from the stick, moved on toward the house. Madam Alia's game certainly was effective in dealing with Orientals.

A moment later Orme and Bessie had crossed the roomy veranda and were at the door, while the old man, still grumbling, swung around the circle of the drive and rattled away. Orme's heart was pounding. When the servant answered the bell, he drew back and he did not hear the words which Bessie spoke in a low voice. They were ushered into a wide reception hall, and the servant went to announce them.

"You wish to see her alone," said Bessie. "Go in there and I will arrange it."

He went as she directed, into a little reception room, and there he waited while subdued feminine greetings were exchanged in the hall without. Then, at last, through the doorway came the gracious, lovely figure of the girl.

"Oh," she whispered, "I knew you would come, dear—I knew."

He took her hands and drew her to him. But with a glance at the doorway she held herself away from him.

In his delight at seeing her he had almost forgotten his mission. But now he remembered.

"I have the papers," he said, taking them from his pocket.

"I was sure you had them. I was sure that you would come."

He laid them in her hands. "Forgive me, Girl, for fooling you with that blank contract."

She laughed happily. "I didn't look at it until I got home. Then I was so disappointed that I almost cried. But when I thought it over, I understood. Oh, my dear, I believed in you so strongly that even then I went to my father and told him that the papers were on the way—that they would be here in time. I just simply knew you would come."

Regardless of the open doorway he clasped her closely, and she buried her face in his coat with a little laugh that was almost a sob. Then, suddenly, she left him standing there and, holding the papers tight, went from the room.

says it is surprising how many old-fashioned remedies are being used, which goes to show that it is hard to improve some of our grandmothers' old, time-tried remedies. For instance, for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy, nothing equaling our grandmothers' "sage tea" has ever been discovered. Although, by the addition of sulphur and other ingredients, this old-fashioned brew has been made more effective as a scalp tonic and color restorer. Nowadays when our hair comes out or gets faded or gray, instead of going to the garden or garret for herbs and making the "tea" ourselves, we simply go to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. This preparation is sold by all leading druggists for 50 cents and $1 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

The Reading of Telegraph Messages by Sound.

STORY OF THE FIRST TRIAL.

A Lack of Tape Caused Alonso B. Cornell to Attempt Interpreting the Morse Code by Ear—The Discovery
That Abolished the Use of the Tape.

Ezra Cornell is known in history as the father of Cornell university, as one of the men who helped to build the first telegraph line and as an ardent organizer of telegraph systems in the early days, being instrumental in the formation of the now famous Western Union Telegraph company. His son, Alonso B. Cornell, became ultimately vice president of the Western Union and governor of New York state—high commercial and political honors.

Yet he once confessed to me that he felt he should be credited with the additional honor of having made the discovery that telegraph messages could be read by ear, and he seemed to take more pride in his part in bringing this about than he did in any of his other achievements.

"I was trained as a telegraph operator," said Mr. Cornell in telling me the story. "I suppose I took to telegraphy naturally because of my father's deep and large interests in the then new mode of communication. Anyway, I learned the Morse key easily, and I was, in fact, very fond of telegraphing from both the practical and the scientific standpoints.

"One afternoon, sometime in the early fifties, when I was stationed at Albany, N. Y., there was an unusual inrush of newspaper dispatches—I was in charge of the press key—and in the midst of the task of receiving them I found to my consternation that I was out of tape. Before taking my seat before the key I had neglected to replenish the tape reel.

"There was a bountiful supply of tape in the cellar of the building, but it was a long trip there—there were no elevators in those days—and I knew that to go there I would waste precious time. And there were those anxious newspaper men hanging over my shoulder.

"Suddenly, as I fished about mentally for the quickest way out of my dilemma, this thought popped into my head: 'You don't need any tape. Half the time you don't look at it when the dispatches are coming in before you write them out. You trust to your ears to tell what the instrument says. Why not do so now?' Instantly I determined to see whether or not I could take the dispatches by sound alone."

"I put my fingers on the key and broke in on New York, whence the dispatches were coming. 'Send rather slowly and very distinctly,' I asked the man at the other end of the wire. He at once began to do so—not without some curiosity as to my reason, I found out later.

"But I didn't think of that at the time, for I was glowing all over with the knowledge that I could write out the dispatches—and write them correctly, for they made sense—simply listening to the sounds that the key made.

"Thus I continued taking the dispatches to the very end. Then the New York operator called me. 'What are you doing up there?' he asked. 'Why did you want me to send slowly and distinctly?'

"I answered that I had said goodby to the telegraph tape forever and told him of the discovery I had made. He was immediately interested. 'Send me slowly and very distinctly fifteen or twenty words, and I'll see whether or not I can do the same thing,' he requested.

"I did so, full of confidence, and a little later there came to me this message: 'I've done it too. Some of the other boys say they can. I predict that within a month there won't be an inch of tape used in the New York office.'

"Years later," added Mr. Cornell, "I was told that about the time that I discovered for myself a new and revolutionary method of receiving telegraph messages the same method was also discovered by an operator in the main office in Pittsburgh. I have no doubt that this is true. Sooner or later the discovery was bound to be made not only in one, but several offices. But I have always felt that I was the first to make the discovery and should be credited with it in telegraphic history."—Boston Globe.

Watering the Horse.

It is allowable when a horse is hot to let him have three or four swallows of cool water, but no more. The few swallows will help cool him, and another limited drink may be given every few minutes for four or five times, after which he may drink his fill without danger. In careless or inexperienced hands, however, the only safe way is to let the horse stand for half an hour or more with no water until he is fairly cooled off.—Country Life in America.

Descriptive.

"The eye of a little miss was attracted by the sparkle of dew at early morning. 'Mamma,' she exclaimed, 'it's hotter'n I thought it was.' 'What do you mean?'

"Look here: the grass is all covered with perspiration."—St. Louis Star.

THE PRESIDENT URGES HARMONY

Taft Calls On Republicans to Forget Differences.

BRIEF REFERENCE TO STRIFE

In His Contribution to the Republican Campaign Text-Book, the President Makes Only a Guarded Reference to the Differences in the Party and Calls on Republicans to Forget All These.

New York, Aug. 29.—An urgent call for all Republicans to forget their differences after the nominations of their party have been made and to unite in trying to elect Republican nominees and thus insure the further carrying out of platform promises is made in the letter which President Taft has written for use in the campaign text-book. The letter, addressed to Chairman McKinley of the Republican congressional committee, virtually takes the place of a party platform in the campaign this fall, and it is plain the president intended it for such. Only a brief and guarded reference is made to any factional strife within the party, and that in the very beginning of the letter. Assuming that party candidates will have already been selected by the time his letter is published, which, however, is not the case, the question will be, says Taft, "Not what complexion of Republicanism one prefers, but whether it is better for the country to have the Republican party control the legislation for the next two years and further redeem its promises, or to enable a Democratic majority in the house either to interpose a veto to Republican measures or to formulate and pass bills to carry out Democratic principles."

Only twice does the name of Mr. Taft's predecessor appear in his letter, and that in reference to conservation. To Mr. Roosevelt Taft gives the credit for arousing public interest in this subject. A large part of the letter is a summary of the legislation of the last session of congress as evidence of the desire of the Republican party to fulfill its promises.

Among the measures yet to be enacted and for which he asks the return of a Republican majority, Mr. Taft places the measure to curb the injunction powers. He declares that the Democratic substitute "would create a privileged class of lawless workmen and would seriously impair the power of the courts of equity to do justice."

The regulation of stocks and bonds of railroads, a ship subsidy measure and a national board of health are other promises which remain to be kept, the president asserts. Those who wish for such legislation, in describing which Taft uses the word "progressive," should vote for Republican candidates, the president insists.

Broke His Motoring Record.
Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—With 175 more miles to the credit of the White House touring car, President Taft chugged into Beverly last night, tired, dusty and pleased with his Sunday trip to the New Hampshire hills and his reception at the home of Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh. It was the longest motor trip the president has ever made.

GEORGIA POLITICS
Tom Watson Adds to Their Gaiety by Extraordinary Charge.
Thomson, Ga., Aug. 29.—The climax of the fight which Thomas E. Watson, once candidate for president on the Populist ticket, has been making on Congressman Hardwick came Sunday when he made the charge that Hardwick is planning his assassination in the belief that Hoke Smith, after he is inaugurated governor, will pardon him as Governor Patterson pardoned the slayer of Senator Carmack in Tennessee.

"Hardwick purposed to take me at a disadvantage some day when I am not prepared for him, get the drop on me with pistol or gun and shoot me," said Watson. "His mind is so disordered by the long years of intemperance that he is capable of believing that he can kill me as old Duncan Cooper killed Carmack, and that he would be pardoned by Governor Smith as Carmack's assassin was pardoned by Patterson."

THE DARKTOWN NINE
Umpire's Close Decision Was the Signal for a Bloody Riot.

Brooks, Ga., Aug. 29.—A ball game between negro clubs for the championship of Fayette county Sunday afternoon broke up in a riot in the ninth inning, and as a result three ball players are dead, three probably fatally injured and several less seriously hurt. The dead men are members of the Brooks team, which was opposed by the Hartford team. Pistols, knives and baseball bats were used in the riot. Scores of spectators took sides with the rival teams.

The trouble was caused by a close decision of the umpire, which allowed the Brooks team to score the winning run. Although nearly all the fighting raged about the umpire, he escaped without serious injury.

DENVER GREETS COL. ROOSEVELT

Mountain City Turns Herself Loose for Ex-President.

ADDRESSED THE LEGISLATURE

After Being Greeted by a Twenty-One Gun Salute the Colonel Reviewed a Big Parade and Ate a Chuck-Wagon Feed Given by the Press Club, and Then Made His Set Speech Before the Colorado Legislature.

Denver, Col., Aug. 29.—Colonel Roosevelt arrived here at 11 o'clock this morning and was greeted with a 21-gun salute. Denver has spread itself to give the ex-president a big reception, and he will be kept on the move all day long. A monster parade at noon passed by for the colonel to review. When that was over he addressed the Colorado legislature and made his set speech. The Spanish War Veterans will rally and dinner of formality will occupy Mr. Roosevelt this evening. The city is in holiday attire.

THE REAL THING

The Colonel Had a Touch of Actual Ranch Life Sunday.

Sheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 29.—Cheyenne settled down to its regular routine this morning as soon as the Roosevelt special pulled out for Denver. The cowpunchers have returned to their ranches. The Sioux and Shoshone Indians, except "Bring-in-the-Fish," have left. "Bring-in-the-Fish" got outside of a couple of steins of brandy Saturday night and was pinched as a result.

T. R. has longed for the west and the west has taken him in. He got a touch of the real west Sunday afternoon. The old hankering for the plains and the plains people, with whom he spent several years before he broke into the political game seriously, has been satisfied. He mounted a "hoss" and rode twenty miles out to Senator Warren's sheep ranch. He ate a game dinner and he whooped whenever he felt like it. Formality had Lieutenant Tompkins, R. S. Van Tassel and Nat Baker, a ranchman, went with T. R. Senator Warren used an automobile. Van Tassel is seventy-five years old, a man of remarkable vitality, who years ago fought the Indians and nearly got scalped. He's a scrapper from way back. The colonel thought him immense. Warren's ranch is about fifteen miles from Cheyenne, and the pace that old man Van Tassel set for the bunch caused the colonel to sit up and take notice, but T. R. stayed on the job and never wavered for a second. They had three cow ponies ready for him, using them as relays, because the colonel is heavy and keeps anything, whether it's human or an animal, working steadily. The colonel found many cowpunchers and rough riders and twisters and peepers awaiting his arrival. He rode over the ranch with the crowd, saw them do a few stunts, and then sat down to a big game dinner in the house. T. R. enjoyed the eats to beat the band. Everybody pitched in and helped themselves and got after the sage chickens and lamb and things voraciously. When they got through they weren't served with finger bowls, either. If you asked for one of them things on a ranch they'd probably cleave your gullet and end you right then and there. T. R. is wise to the little tricks.

The riders sat around and smoked a while after dinner. Mr. Roosevelt sat on the steps and spun yarns of the old west as he knew it twenty-seven years ago. He told of experiences with Joe LaForce, a dead shot who used to be feared when six-shooters were not hidden from public view and were used without deliberation.

"Joe has had a long and varied career," the colonel said, "a career of justifiable homicide and things like that." And Mr. Roosevelt roared with the others, who of course understood the circumstances. He was speaking of days when homicide was always justifiable and open to congratulations.

Along about 8 o'clock the colonel and others said farewell and began the journey home. T. R. motored back. It was not very dark, for the stars shone clearly and the way was easy picking. They traveled at a good clip and got back tired and happy. Mr. Roosevelt went to bed at once, for he had to arise early this morning for the Denver trip.

NO MONEY FOR MODERN IDEAS

Sums of Money Expended For Twentieth Century Educational Methods Cause of Trouble.

CHARGED BACK TO TRUSTEES

Officials Are "Viewing With Alarm" the Action of the State Board of Accounts.

Township trustees and public school teachers who have been endeavoring to keep pace with modern methods of teaching are "viewing with alarm" the actions of the State board of accounts in charging back to trustees certain moneys which have been paid the teachers in carrying out some of the modern plans, says the Indianapolis News. For some time the instructors in county institutes, teachers in State and county associations and school lecturers generally have been advocating such things as county meetings of teachers, visiting days and township superintendence. A large number of the trustees, adopting the theories of the lecturers as being in line with better educational methods, have been using township money in this direction and now find the money thus spent charged back to them, on the grounds that such expenditures was not provided for by law.

One of the most common practices has been that of paying teachers for attending meetings of county associations of teachers. These meetings were usually held on the Friday and Saturday following Thanksgiving day, and the teachers were allowed two days' pay for attending. Under the law the teacher can collect for Thanksgiving day, even though no school is convened. This was allowed by the State board, but the payment for the extra day was charged back.

Another common practice has been paying the teacher a full day's wage for visiting other schools. The trustees and teacher were told that for a teacher to spend a day seeing how school was taught by some other teacher was a good thing, and a number of townships adopted the practice. All money thus spent has been charged back.

The theory of township superintendence has been more recently adopted. The plan followed is to select a teacher of exceptional ability and to place him or her in general charge of the schools of the township, extra salary being allowed for the extra duties. This plan has been sanctioned by leading educators and institute lecturers, and many of the trustees have adopted it. They have found, however, that the State board is not in sympathy, legally, with the theory, and that the money thus spent has been listed for them to return to the township treasury.

"We do not say that these practices are not good," said a member of the State Board. "We merely hold that the trustees have no right to spend the money in this way. If the educators wish to introduce due these new methods, they should not begin where they have been beginning—with the trustees and the teachers—but should go to the legislature. It must not be forgotten in the efforts to bring about reform that the entire business of a township is controlled wholly by law."
